For this project, I chose the Horizon Template. This website had a very sleek design without having too many moving parts. Some things I have not included due to requiring moving objects, are the top menu that follows while you scroll through the page, as well as the hamburger menu in the mobile version of the page.

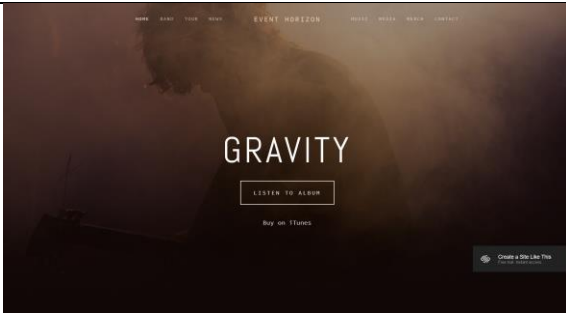

To personalize it a little, I have switched the band used in the template to another band. I have kept the background colours and text colours the same.

All links on my webpage do something. Whether it is directing you to an error page (most links), direct you to my second webpage (Contact), or direct you to a site where you can purchase the album shown in the website. I have also made the songs selectable where they will bring you to a YouTube page for that song.

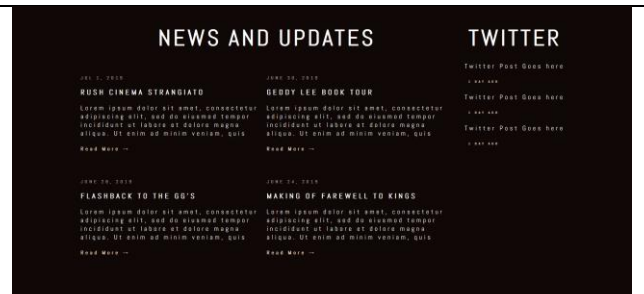

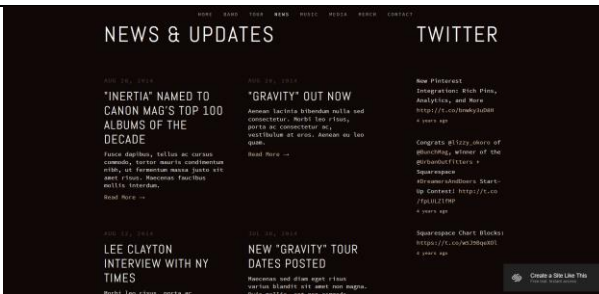

The tablet mode that was shown in the template was in landscape mode, so there is not much of a difference between it and the desktop mode.

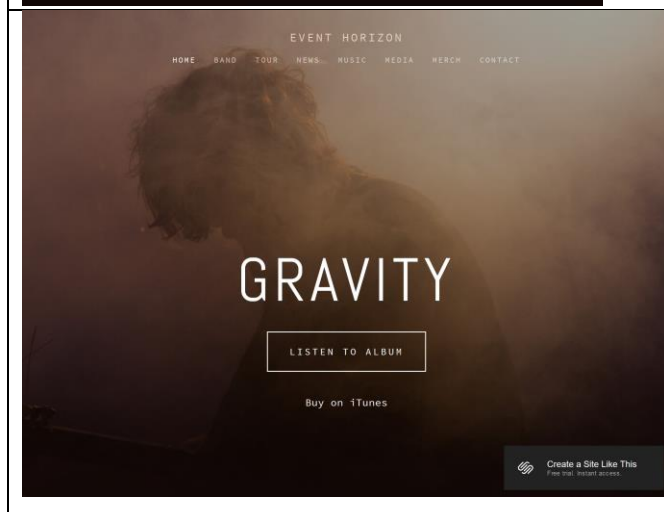

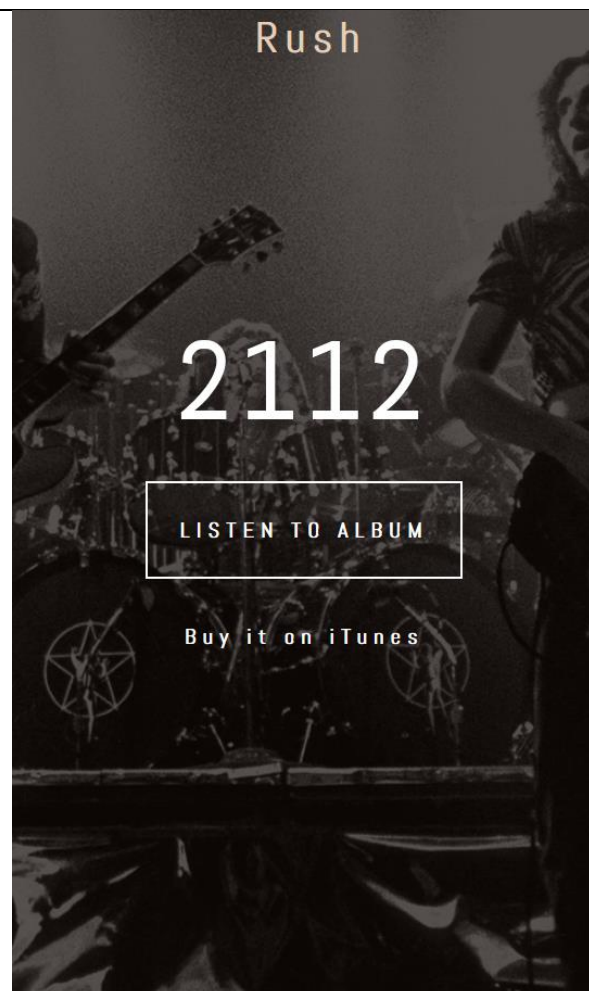

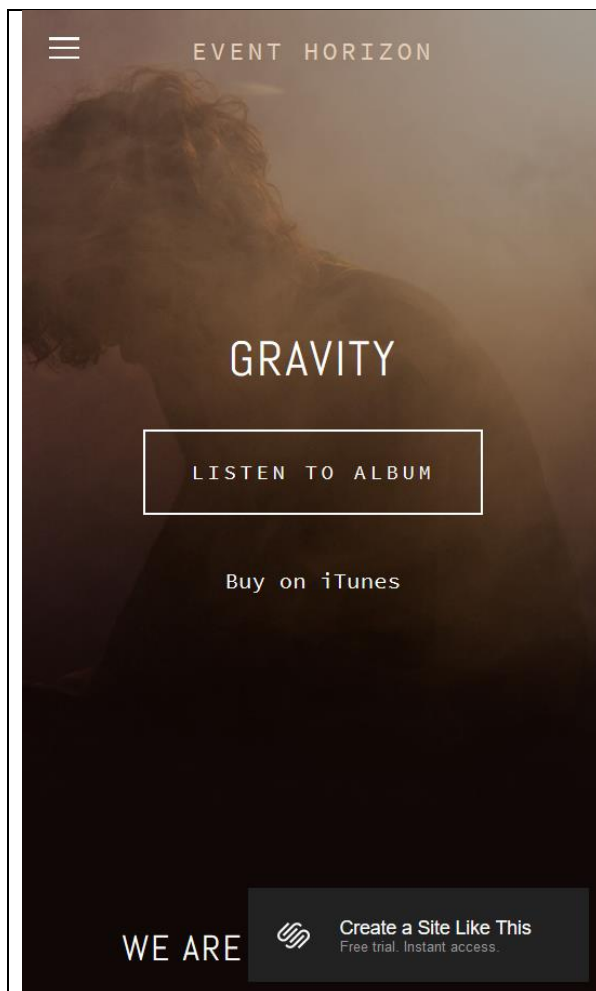

The link to the template is: <https://www.squarespace.com/templates/music-entertainment> (It is called "Horizon")
